SUMMER HEAT

Two women are the perfect ally against the sun's baking grip in the heat of summer. They are the only ones who can help you stay cool in your summer wardrobe. They are the only ones who can help you stay cool in your summer wardrobe. They are the only ones who can help you stay cool in your summer wardrobe.

That's not the only evidence I have to point. Science is showing just how strong our bonds with animals can be, and what they do for our emotional and psychological well-being. In the 1970s and '80s, researchers started taking note of pet-related benefits, such as decreased blood pressure and improved fitness. And social scientists began to explore how pet owners are more engaged in and connected to their communities, they're also more future-oriented. Then they observed a decrease of cortisol, the stress hormone, in saliva—ours and our animals'—after just 45 minutes of playful interaction.

That's not the only evidence I have to go on. Science is showing just how strong our bonds with animals can be, and what they do for our emotional and psychological well-being. And social scientists began to register how pet owners are more engaged in and connected to their communities; they're also more future-oriented. And who knew that a fallow show could give you the most mind-blowing social commentary? Kerry Washington sat for Post Malone (and 100) alone in Brooklyn's Heritage Square, one of the country's last free Black communities, with a good chat and a collaboration with artist Derrick Adams—an experience that transcended the diving rain but it definitely was followed by the spring 2020 phenomenon: the dancing for Dear King Theatre in Brooklyn, which had a group of Black women dancing in the rain. The experience was so powerful that Washington decided to make a short film about it. She's also been working on a new book, The Black Queen, which is a collection of essays about Black women's experiences. Paris non amour

The model's sister, who is a friend of the author, says that she is a "real Parisian" and that she is a "real Parisian" and that she is a "real Parisian".
